and be positive role models to our younger students. It also provides a platform to develop connections and friendships across the grades while reinforcing the expected behaviours at school.

class or grade reward for their positive behaviour.

National Child Protection Week

Well-being Week also coincides with National Child Protection Week. This week is a great time to consider how we all play a part in fostering a safe and supportive community for children and young people.

In our school and our diocese, we see Safeguarding as a shared responsibility and commitment. Our schools are safe for students to grow and flourish. We recognise that it takes a village to raise a child.

Each year, the children receive level appropriate lessons about personal safety as part of the Personal Development, Health and Physical Education (PDHPE) programs. PDHPE is one of the six learning areas of the NSW Primary Curriculum Framework. Part of this program includes Child Protection education.

This week, all students will be taking part in a Cyber Safety session with our local Police Liaison Officer with the aim of providing practical knowledge about how to stay safe online. I encourage parents to have a discussion with their child/ren about how they can be cyber safe.

To support this further we have also organised a parent session for early next term focusing on cyber safety. I also include a few resources below that will assist parents in supporting child safety in our community.

NSW Police Legacy have released their Child Safety Handbook. This is an excellent, practical resource for families and schools. Please take the time to read and promote within your school communities:

A reminder that our next scheduled Whole School Assembly will be the School Band Assembly is this Friday from around 2:10pm. The Band Assembly is a great opportunity for our musicians to perform some of the works they have been practising together. It is also a chance for students to see the band in action and consider learning to play an instrument. We are very fortunate to have such a wonderful and dedicated band teacher with Mrs Jacobson. Helen does a lot of work creating arrangements for the children to play. We look forward to another great concert next week.

The Kindergarten Assembly is scheduled for Friday Week 9.
